About FORM

For this pilot program 20 high school students will be selected to participate from local public high schools with priority given to students from diverse backgrounds interested in exploring the arts through experimentation, tinkering and making, and in learning more about university life.

Students are expected to be able to get to UCLA each day over the course of the 6-day program via private or public transportation.

FORM Theme: Making, Tinkering, Inventing

This innovative arts program for high school students will be interdisciplinary and process oriented rather than product driven, with an emphasis on exploration and experimentation, combining everyday expertise and the Maker Movement, to create a series of odd, unique, kinetic, Rube Goldberg-style sculptures and objects…!

Faculty:

- Barbara Drucker
  Professor, Art
- Hirsch Perlman
  Professor, Art
- Casey Reas
  Professor, Design Media Arts
- Ben Refuerzo
  Professor, Architecture Urban Design
- Aparna Sharma
  Professor, World Arts & Cultures

Graduate Mentors:

Graduate mentors selected from the School of the Arts & Architecture will guide and support FORM students working on projects invented by the group and developed individually and as a team.

Learning Format:

Small teams of approximately 5 students each will work with graduate mentors on creative projects over the course of the weeklong program. Faculty representing a diverse range of artistic perspectives will rotate between teams to provide guidance and constructive critique.
